BLOOMFIELD PUBLIC SCHOOLS

BLOOMFIELD, NEW JERSEY

SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL
160 BROAD STREET

HARRY M. RICE Principal

CHARLES E. MORGAN Vice-Principal

PETER WILSON Assistant Principal

To the Members of the Class of 1963:

At your first class reunion you will probably play the record which accompanies this 1963 edition of Memories. As a group, you will hear again the orchestration that once formed the everyday accompaniment to your life.

The voices on the record represent the sounds of your past. They will make you aware of the complexity of sound in our school as you analyze individual parts blended into a total arrangement. You will note the cosmopolitan sound of the names which comprise the roster of Bloomfield High School. You will hear the mighty English tongue spoken with the accent of the Eastern United States. You will catch regional accents of teachers who grew up in other areas of our country. You will hear the Norwegian accent of our exchange student. You will hear your own voice attempting to reproduce the voices of other lands.

Yet regardless of differing accents, there will be one quality common to all the voices: the quality of friendship. That quality will be the most endearing tone which your Memories record will preserve for you.

Not on your record, but in your imagination, you will hear again another significant sound from your high school life: the sound of running feet as your class left Foley Field on graduation night. In the echoes of these footsteps are notes of triumph, of loneliness, and of anticipation. These are the sounds of your future.

Each of these notes is symbolic of life itself. Graduation does represent victory, a goal accomplished, the end of thirteen years in school. Now you must walk alone, away from your parents, away from your class.

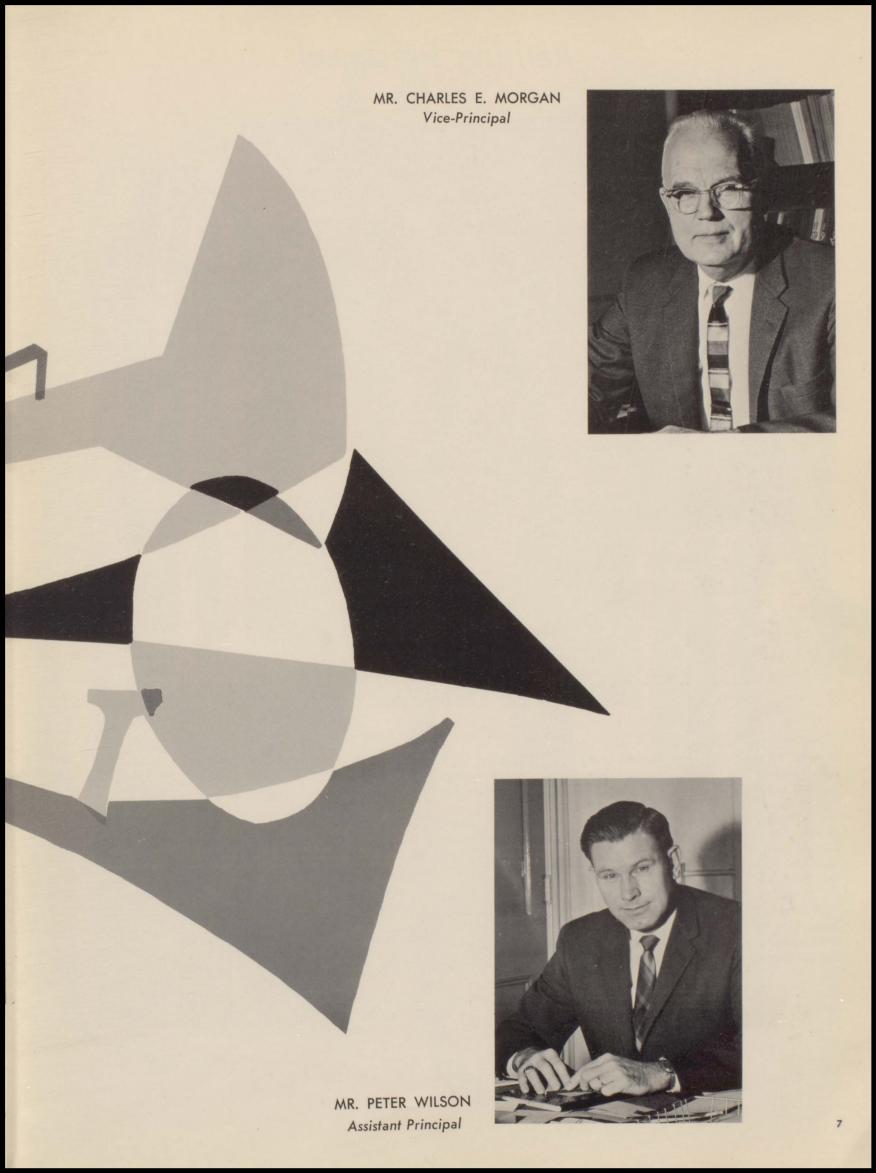

Walking alone, however, does not have to mean walking in loneliness, for you will hear the echoes of new footsteps. You will walk in the exciting rhythm of the college campus; you will walk with the measured rhythm of our Armed Forces; you will walk in the staccato rhythm of people hurrying to work in the morning; you will walk in a joyous rhythm as you match your pace to that of a little child.

Voices of the past and footsteps of the future! May the sound of both echo in your lives to produce "...harmonious sound
On golden hinges moving."

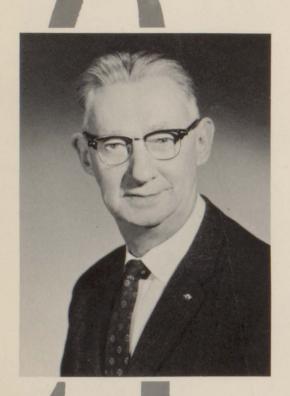

Sincerely yours

HARRY M. RICE Principal

Retiring Personnel

MR. STANLEY BOOMER

A warm personality and sincere devotion to his work will be carried as memories of Mr. Stanley Boomer by students he has prepared for the business world. The head of Bloomfield Senior High School's Business Department, Mr. Boomer has done an excellent and conscientious job in keeping that department efficient and consistent in its high quality. Wisconsin State College and Rutgers University provided Mr. Boomer's college education, and teaching experience in Minnesota, as well as in Chicago, preceded his 1927 membership in Bloomfield's faculty.

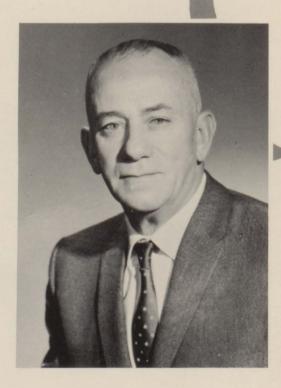

Besides his fine service to Bloomfield High School, he is an active member of the Kiwanis Club and the Masonic Fraternity.

The B.H.S. administration, its faculty, and thirty-six years of graduates extend their sincere appreciation for the guidance, teaching and friendly manner of Mr. Stanley Boomer.

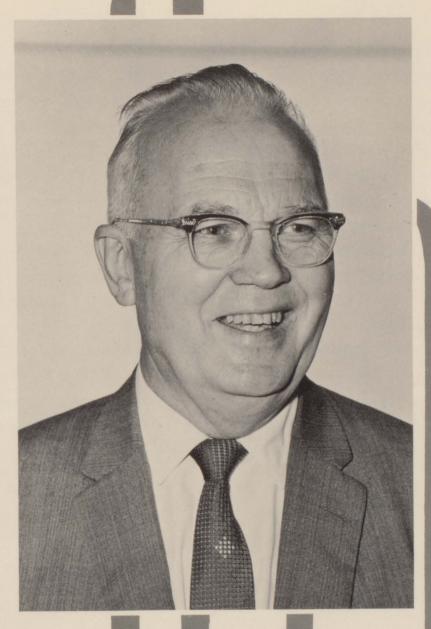

Mr. King will long be remembered by many Bloomfield High School students and faculty members. During his more than thirty-nine years as a custodian at Bloomfield High School, his beneficial actions and friendly manners have graced our corridors.

Although he is retiring from school life, Mr. King still plans to participate in a variety of activities. During his spare hours, he will enjoy boating and saltwater fishing on Florida's Gulf coast with his daughter and wife. He will also spend some leisure moments simply enjoying the warm benefits of the Florida sun.

A veteran of World War I, Mr. King has been with Bloomfield High School since 1924. His service to the school, along with his warm personality, enrich our high school memories. The Class of 1963 extends sincere wishes to you, Mr. King, that you might enjoy a contented life and good fortune during the years that lie ahead.

MR. CHARLES DAVEY KING

MR. CHARLES E. MORGAN

Dedication and conviction are two qualities which exemplify Charles E. Morgan. The service which he has rendered to our school during the past twenty-seven years cannot be measured by words or deeds. It can be expressed only through the lives of students whom he has helped in multitudinous ways because of his devotion to others.

In the one-room schoolhouse in Kansas where he began his career in education, he was not only the teacher, but also doctor and janitor as well. This experience led him to attend Kansas what he eventually same to Bloomfield High.

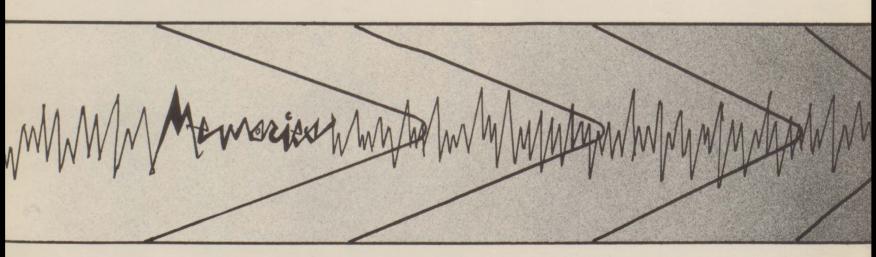

attend Kansas State University, after which he eventually came to Bloomfield High. His varied capabilities in teaching, guidance, and administrative work have been of infinite value to our school.

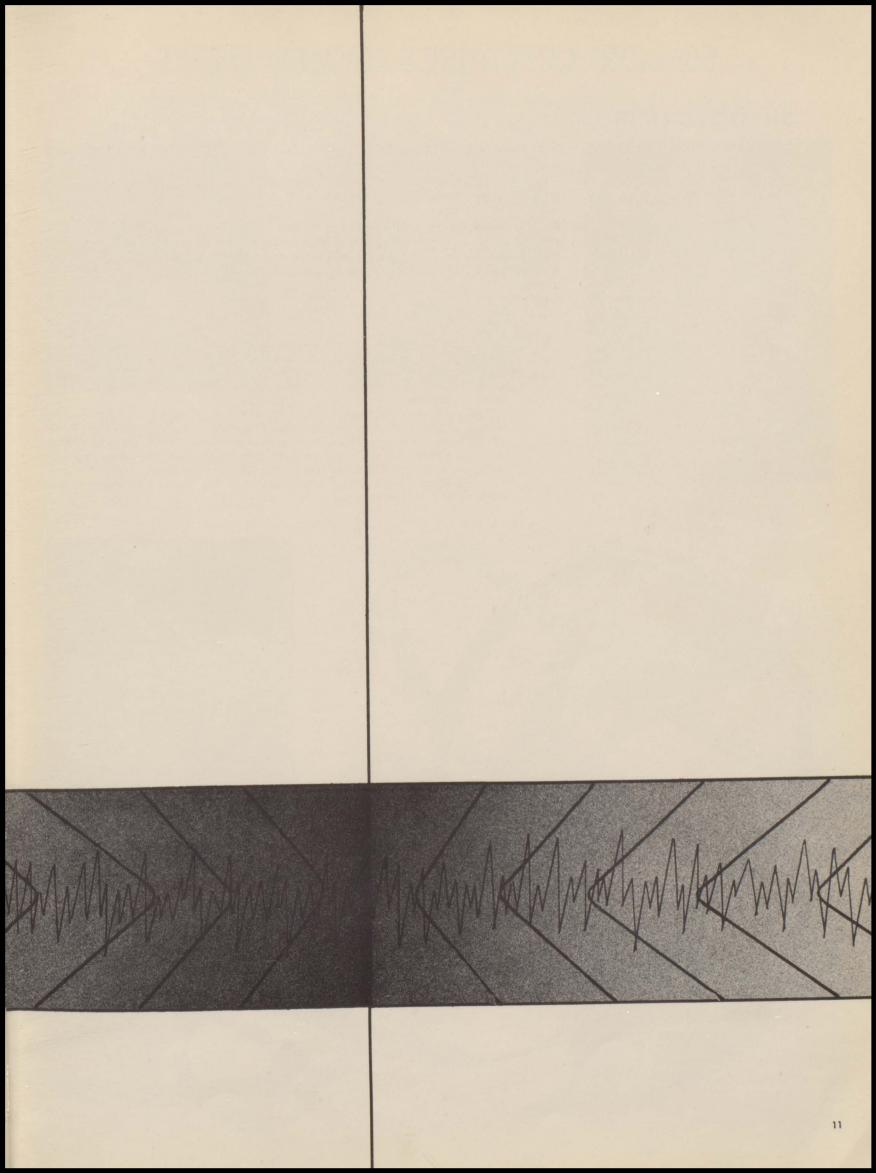

Our most sincere gratitude and best wishes for the future are extended to Mr. Margan in his retirement from Bloomfield High School after his many years of unselfish dedication to the task of serving students here.

MEMORIES '63 has chosen "The Sounds of Living" for its theme. Communication with fellow human beings depends upon man's ability to convert thought waves into sound waves. Through an aural medium, man receives most of his education and expresses his ideas and emotions. Sound is the basis of universal understanding among men.

A multitude of sounds represent Bloomfield High School: the squeaking of chalk across the blackboard, the echoing of feet through the hall after the late bell has rung, the conjugating of verbs in five different languages. The cosmopolitan complex of our high school is characterized by the sounds of the classrooms. Every course has its special terminology; each student has his peculiar way of speaking. The student learns to recognize the subtlety of each sound and to evaluate its meaning.

This year the visual memories in the annual have been augmented with an accompanying record. Not only the faces of the students and faculty, but also their voices, have been preserved for future reminiscence and enjoyment. The staff of MEMORIES '63 proudly presents to you, the Class of '63, the memories of your high school years.

SENIOR GUIDANCE COUNSELORS

In Memoriam

Individual attention and endless hours spent in thoughtful guidance are two reasons why the girls of the Class of '63 will remember their counselor. Preparing dismayed students for the challenging problems which they will encounter in college is one area in which she excelled. Her sincerity and warm understanding encouraged many a girl coming to her office to solve a personal, as well as a scholastic, problem.

For many, graduation is the turning point of their lives—a point of indecision. For others, it is another step toward a college education. Both present problems which to the student sometimes seem hard to solve. When such problems have arisen, senior boys have always received advice and reassurance from their counselor, Mr. Brunetto.

Many boys looked upon Mr. Brunetto more as a friend with whom they could discuss both their school work and personal matters than as a counselor. His untiring efforts aided many in the molding of their futures and the choosing of their colleges or careers. Patient and understanding, Mr. Brunetto played an inmeasurable role in our high school life, one from which we all benefited.

The Senior Class expresses sincere thanks to him, for his guidance is sure to remain with us for many years.

SENIORS ACTIVITIES

Life does not consist of purely academic pursuits. Reasonably demanding of time and energy, interests must be varied. Bloomfield insures this necessary diversion from the purely intellectual requisites of high school through its vast extracurricular activities program.

The Student Council encourages justice, equality, and harmony. Language clubs, civic clubs, and student publications arouse interest and offer opportunities for practical application of acquired knowledge. The music organizations promote the rhythmic abilities of the gifted participants while providing entertainment for the student body.

YEARBOOK Captures Mood and Madness

2:02 marks the jangling of bells through teeming corridors, the slow flow from floor to floor, the beginning of eighth period. In forty-three classrooms throughout Bloomfield High School, books slam, bodies shuffle into waiting seats, and voices mingle in explanation of a thousand thoughts.

The scene in MEMORIES room has a different hum. It is the sound of creativity—of pencils meeting paper, of the artist's pen sweeping across a design, of cameras snapping to record school life, of typewriters clicking furiously.

With yesterday's tradition and today's trends, the staff works to create a yearbook for the many tomorrows in the future.

Your recording, included for the first time in MEMORIES' history, holds in sound the happy and serious remembrances of Bloomfield High School. Years after graduation, through this disc of plastic we will cheer again for the Bengals, laugh at the antics of classmates, and sing the Alma Mater.

To the Class of 1963:

As we peer through the yearbook in future years, we can recall our favorite memories through the various sounds portrayed in MEMORIES '63 and recorded on the accompanying record. Voices of our class officers and principal, students cheering at sport exhibitions, the Alma Mater sung by the student body, and our memorable graduation are preserved for easy recollection later in life. Thus, no matter to what ends of the world our careers might take us, MEMORIES '63 will serve as a quick reference to our three years spent together in Bloomfield High School.

To all those who have worked unselfishly to produce this yearbook, especially to our advisers--Mr. Leite, Miss Whitsel, Mr. Eller, Mr. Willever, and Mr. Gruszczynski--I express my most sincere

Prize-Winning Publication

Since 1938, the award-winning STUDENT PRINTS has been a strong literary voice in Bloomfield High School. It surpasses its basic role of a newspaper—the reporting of straight school news—by enriching its pages with creative writing, art work, and lively features. Fond memories of the long afternoons in room 107 on deadline days will be recalled by the staff members, and they will remember with pride the high ratings given our publication by the Columbia Press Association.

Formal merits notwithstanding, it is the students themselves who give the final and actual rating of a school newspaper. It is their names and faces, their honors and their spirit that fill the printed page. Their experiences of today, pounded by the presses into the copy of the STUDENT PRINTS, will remain imprinted in their memory.

Students Gain International Understanding

Peace through understanding has always been a major goal of Bloomfield High School. In this respect, the language clubs fulfill an integral facet. These clubs represent countries and people who are as diversified in their customs as they are in their backgrounds. The opportunities afforded by the informal atmosphere of a club provide the students with a comprehensive understanding of these peoples. With the appreciation and comprehension of the miraculous sound of people communicating in different languages, a major step in achieving world peace is gained.

Sound, a basic method of transposing knowledge, acts as a bridge between the teacher and pupil. With the exchange and reception of facts and ideas, the student and teacher share a profitable venture. The student increases his store of knowledge, and the teacher feels a sense of accomplishment by assisting the student to acquire knowledge. The acquisition of knowledge is only a part of the continuous educational process, for the recipient of knowledge must in turn diffuse this knowledge to maintain an interminable cycle. The faculty of Bloomfield High School hopes that the process of education has instilled within their students a respect and appreciation for knowledge.

Students receive a comprehensive, well-balanced course in English, with stress on the development of creative writing and the interpretation of literature. During sophomore year, such books as Silas Marner, The Sea Around Us, and The House of Seven Gables highlight the program. With The Cycle of American Literature as one of the chief references, students concentrate upon American authors and ideas during their junior year. Classic American novels, including The Scarlet Letter and The Red Badge of Courage, are analyzed; the student is expected to augment his classroom knowledge with outside reading. Especially beneficial is the vocational unit in which all juniors participate.

The world of British literature dominates the course offered to senior students. Lord Jim, Macbeth, and Return of the Native are extensively studied. British influences on American literature are also emphasized.

Each year grammar is studied to improve speaking and writing, and the mastery of Word Wealth assures the building of better vocabularies.

Under the direction of Doctor Vesta Parsons, selected college preparatory students are offered an Advanced Placement English course which trains eligible candidates for special consideration in the selection of college English courses.

Five Languages Add Foreign Flavor

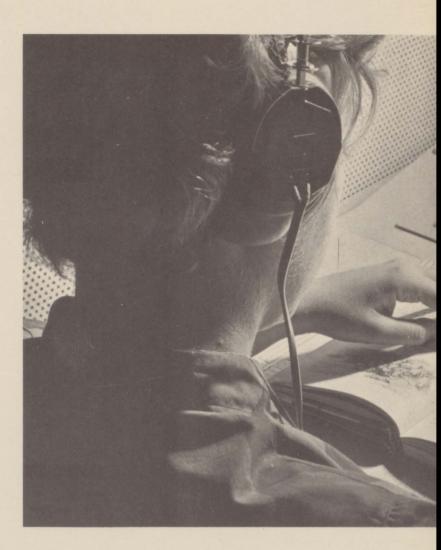

JILL A. BARLOW B.A. German German Club

Bloomfield's Foreign Language Department is outstanding in two respects: its diversity and its high standards. Students benefit, not only from modern electronic equipment, but from the knowledge of ancient cultures taught by extremely competent teachers.

The sounds of "Felicitaciones!" uttered at first with uncertainty and in stilted styles, are soon developed through practice into the true manner of an authentic Spaniard. "Congratulzaione!" exclaim Italian scholars, suddenly realizing that they can speak a foreign tongue. French is one of the most popular romance languages. "Félicitations!" is spoken fluently after a little diligent practice. "Herzliche Glückwunsch!" Don't be surprised: it's German. Bloomfield students have found our German program to be varied and interesting because of its three phases: grammar, literature, and culture.

Ancient cultures are revived in Latin. Our Latin students first master the language and then enhance their educations by reading Virgil and Cicero. "Congratulationes!"

Each foreign language has its unique sounds—some harsh and guttural, others soft and flowing. Each is representative of a population, ancient or modern, located in a small hamlet or spread throughout the world. All these languages advance the art of communication, the means of expressing one's emotions.

To the graduates who make up the Class of 1963, the Spanish have wished "Felicitaciones"; the Germans, "Herzliche Glückwunsch"; and the Romans, "Congratulationes." In American, we add, "Congratulations!"

SOCIAL SCIENCE . . . Knowledge of Yesterday Aids in Understanding Tomorrow

ROBERT E. BLOMQUIST B.A. U. S. History; World History

World History is an elective which defines the customs, characteristics, and people of foreign lands. U.S. History I, taught during the junior year, is a chronological study of the people and events which contributed to the making of America. Every significant aspect of our history, from Columbus to current events, is studied and analyzed carefully.

In the senior year, the value of American History I and its relationship to the present is realized in U.S. History II. In order to understand the causes of current events and the strategy of the cold war, students are taught the principal aspects of the main forms of government. The American system of democracy is studied exhaustively for its weak and strong points, with particular emphasis on the Constitution, the supreme law of the land. Economics is studied during the second semester; this includes study in finance and banking. Through this survey of American government, the student is prepared to understand the policy of the United States as the leader of the free world.

Today's world is a universe of science! Regardless of professional pursuits, a person rarely departs from the realm of science. In the sciences, students themselves are given an opportunity to provide solutions to questions. Once the background and explanation of an experiment have been provided by the teacher, the student is then given an occasion to perform the experiment, whether it be dissecting a crayfish, measuring the speed of a falling object, or mixing a chemical compound. From these experiments, the student learns the basic principles of such sciences as biology, physics, and chemistry.

The competent scientific staff maintains a conducive program at Bloomfield High School. With the variety of scientific courses offered, the student has the opportunity to take courses in which he is specifically interested or in which he can develop a general background.

MATHEMATICS . . . Using Logic to Comprehend New Concepts

In today's world where answers needed are proportionate to that of a speeding rocket, the mathematical computer provides solutions to the formidable problems. Although they are more efficient than man, the very existence and operation of these instruments depend upon the human element. In high school, the student does not learn the advanced theories and procedures necessary to solve intricate problems, but he is provided with the basic concepts. These are an integral part of mathematical science. In Bloomfield High School, various levels of study in the field of mathematics are offered, ranging from the very basic ideas of Math 10 to the complexities of Math 12. Every student is given an opportunity to perform in a math course suited to his capabilities and designed to equip him with the knowledge necessary to fulfill his needs after graduation.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION . . . Agility and Acrobatics

An essential adjunct to education of the intellect is the co-ordination of the individual body to its highest point of perfection. The importance of athletic participation is documented by President Kennedy's enthusiasm and support for a physically sound America through a nationwide physical fitness program. Schools throughout the United States have accordingly accentuated the role of athletics in education, and Bloomfield High School, in step with progress, has instituted a modern, stringent program of physical education for its students' benefit.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION . . . Physical Development Adjunct to Education of Mind

The shrill sound of the instructor's whistle echoing through the gym directs a physical education class in its calisthenics. Body-building exercises, including sit-ups, push-ups, and deep knee bends, keep the students in top physical condition. However, calisthenics comprises only a small part of the curriculum offered by the Bloomfield High School Physical Education Department. Through the various exercises and intramural sports, including basketball, softball, and volleyball, physical development and co-ordination are improved.

The buzzing of a switchboard, the whirring of a mimeograph machine—these are the sounds familiar to the students of Bloomfield's Business Education Department. This program provides thorough training in office procedure. Beginning the sophomore year, a prospective secretary or office worker can start her training with typing and bookkeeping or record keeping. Good marks in typing and English are required to enable the student to study stenography and typing, bookkeeping, and Business English in the junior year. Senior-year business activities include secretarial training or office practice with the use of switchboard, dictaphone, and other business machines. This program is an outstanding one as is evidenced by the acceptance of numerous Bloomfield girls into top advanced training schools.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS . . . Manual Training

For Careers in Industry

For those students who wish to gain a better background in the field of industrial arts, this department offers a variety of beneficial resources. The preparation and properties of metals, woods, and plastics are studied. With a fundamental knowledge of these materials and numerous tools, both manual and mechanical, the students transform their ideas and plans into projects of beauty and practicality.

The silence of the drafting room is often broken by the sharpening of pencils, the clattering of drawing boards, and the ruffle of tracing paper. Learning the essentials of good printing is also a part of the varied curriculum. In these classes, students learn to operate presses by hand while practicing the fundamentals of typesetting.

To amplify this unit of study, the practical course of mechanics of transportation is offered. Over the roar of engines and the grinding of machinery, the boys in these classes study the engine in relation to auto mobility to set the foundation for a mechanical career.

Varsity Choir; J.V. Choir; Girls' Chorus; Music Appreciation; Voice; Boys' Chorus Belletones; Bengalaires; Varsity Ensemble; Musical Monday

Band, orchestra, string ensemble, and Serenaders are incorporated in the Instrumental Music Department. Many hours of practice are required to obtain the ultimate goal of harmonious sound.

The pleasing sounds of combined voices in the Varsity Choir have complemented numerous holiday programs. Other singing groups include Girls' Glee Club, Boys' Chorus, the Belletones, and the Bengalaires. Co-operation, as well as hard work, are two ingredients for success in these groups.

Foundation or basic art is explored in Art I, where the student learns to apply the fundamentals of design. Commercial lettering, layout design, and printing are taught in second-year art. Art III develops the sketching of the human form from simple block outline to exact detail.

Crafts provide other artistic variations in clay, mosaics, basketry, and jewelry-making. Creative ability is the most important factor for success in these courses.

HOME ECONOMICS . . . Girls Learn Essentials of Home Planning

EMILY E. De MEO B.S., M.A. Home Economics Chefs Club

LOUISE C. MONTGOMERY B.S., M.Ed. Home Economics Home Economics Club

An ever-widening field, home economics provides girls with a basic knowledge of cooking and sewing skills in preparation for college and domestic life. Many areas of special interest lead the girls to diverse and rewarding careers. In the foods laboratory, the perking of a kettle or the bubbling of food denote the meal-planning and balancing courses that aid girls in their future studies of nutrition and diatetics.

All the basic sewing skills are included in the sewing field. Nimble fingers guide the buzzing machines as they learn the basic techniques of dressmaking and fashion design. The basic fundamentals learned here are important in their ultimate goal of creativity.

CAFETERIA . . . Chatter and Cheeseburgers Generate Cafeteria Charm

BEATRICE T. ALSTEIN
B.S., M.A.
Supervisor of Home Economics;
Director of Cafeterias

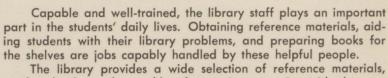

One of the noisiest, but most congenial, atmospheres in the school is that of the cafeteria. Directed by Mrs. Alstein and her efficient staff, the cafeteria produces nutritious and well-balanced meals for many hungry students. The kitchen clamors with various culinary sounds as the well-trained staff prepares the food for the high school faculty and students, as well as junior high students.

Maintaining a state of cleanliness in the cafeteria is only one of the numerous, but important, jobs of the custodians. Headed by Mr. Lehing, the custodians perform varied services which keep Bloomfield High School in tiptop shape. The rumbling wheels of the janitors' carts resound in all the halls as they carefully maintain the excellent condition of the school.

STAGE DOOR Opens on

"Curtain time!" is a familiar sound backstage at the All-School Production. The last minute scurrying and final finishing touches are vital parts of this highlight of the school year. Under the expert direction of Mr. William Stine, this play provides the perfect medium through which the students of Bloomfield High School display their numerous talents. These students, selected from every grade level, utilize the skills which they have learned in such classes as dramatic arts, speech, music, and art. Even those students not actually participating in the play find reward in directing, coaching, painting, erecting scenery, and applying make-up.

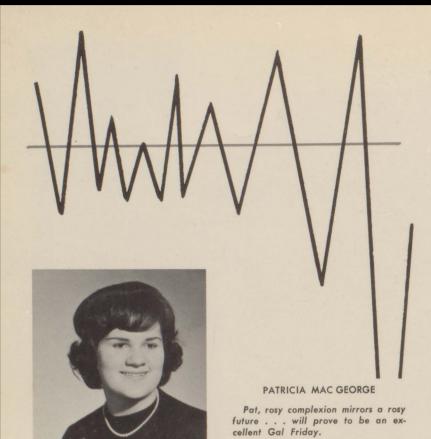

This year's All-School Production was Stage Door, a dramatic comedy by Edna Ferber. The leading roles were expertly enacted by Sue Stovekin, Alan Costa, and Glenn Hart. The story depicted the struggle of young actresses and playwrights seeking to perfect their careers on the Broadway stage.

CLUBS Provide Outlets for Diverse Talents

A school as large as B.H.S. must offer outlets for thought and further education other than normal classroom study. By listening to various sounds within the school, one discovers that these avenues are numerous and varied.

The clamor of machinery and the idling of a welltuned engine characterize the Mechanics of Transportation Club. Here, boys apply classroom principles by using school equipment to work on their own cars.

Behind every play and assembly program was the stage crew, which was responsible for the efficiency and professional touch of each program. Matched with a hard-working Display Committee which advertised school activities via the showcases and bulletin boards, the two groups always contributed to the success of all school productions.

The rattling of dishes and bubbling of a culinary creation do not always characterize girls at work, for in the Chef's Club, it's a man's world.

The Home Economics Club served the community and the school through its thoughtful projects. The students are also grateful to the boys of Audio-Visual Aids, whose showing of motion pictures and slides enhanced our learning experiences.

Center: Mrs. Nappi, adviser; Elaine Niemas, captain.

The Scotties, Bloomfield High's Drill Team, this year have displayed intricate formations with the precision which rank them high on the list of girls' activities.

The girls worked hard, practicing strenuously and often attending meetings after school. But they were justly rewarded when above the sound of their shuffling feet could be heard the cheering of appreciative audiences at football games and demonstrations at Montclair State College and Madison Square Garden.

The flashing red and gray: that's our Marching Band. During the year, and especially during football season, the band proved to be not only a musical organization but also a group of musicians with an overabundance of school spirit. In addition to cheering the teams and performing at half-times of games, the band also participated in rallies, assemblies, and other special programs.

Action and Thrills Highlight Classic Sport

A new football mentor has introduced new plays, new formations, and new thrills to the B.H.S. fans. Injuries have been the Bengals' most difficult opponents this year. At one time or another, Co-Captains George Salvato and Nick Altieri have been inactive because of various ailments. Even with all this hard luck, Coach Baldwin's boys have exhibited daring skill, dauntless stamina, and determined sportsmanship on the gridiron.

Dash Away, Dash Away,

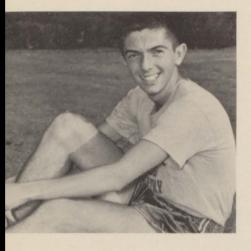

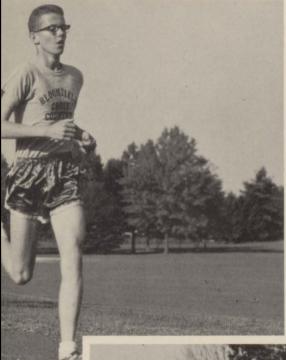

Mr. Williams' cross-country team has completed a rewarding season headed by Captain Richard Mullins. The team is comprised of sophomores, juniors, and seniors. These boys have won eight of twelve meets in which they participated. Winning the Seton Hall trophy this year has been an outstanding achievement. A tremendous amount of effort and diligent work have produced a successful crosscountry team for 1962-63.

For the second year in a row, Bloomfield's skilled soccer team entered the state finals, but the team was deprived of the championship by the soccer squad of Hamilton High. Under the competent coaching of Mr. Robert Nye and his assistant, Mr. F. James White, soccer has achieved a place of popularity in Bloomfield. This year's squad, under the leadership of Co-Captains Philip Eckstrand and Arthur Hafdelin, was recognized for its admirable feats by a very large increase in spectator attendance.

Continuing to be Bloomfield's most consistently successful major sport, Coach George Cella's Cagers combined experience and ability to finish undefeated in Big Ten Conference play and captured the 1962-63 title with a perfect 9-0 slate. Compiling an overall record of sixteen wins and five defeats, the Bengals boasted only one starter over six feet, but made up for this lack of height with fine shooting and all-round balance and hustle.

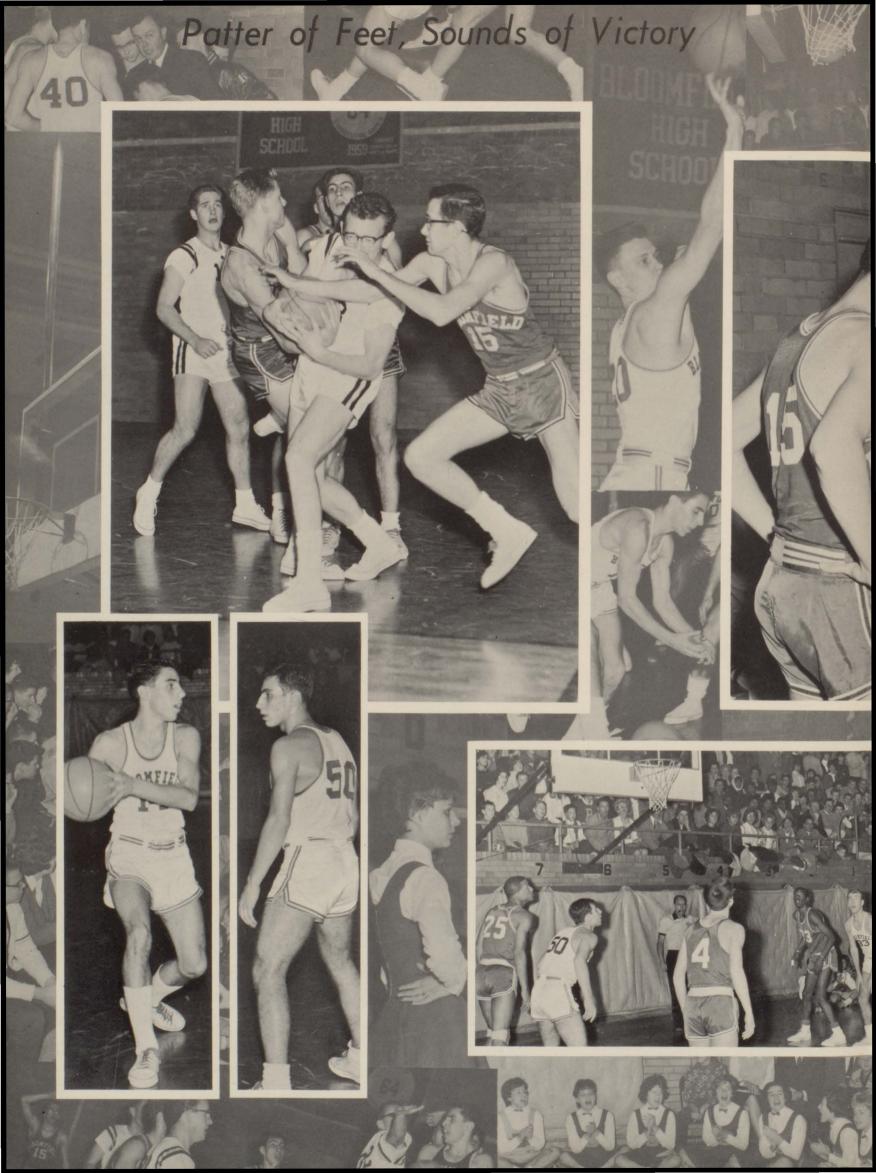

Winning seven of the first eight contests, Bloomfield was led offensively by Joe Leva, with fine support from Jim Kuhl, Bob Friedman, Bill Tyson, and Ed Capozzi, also the squad's best rebounder. Following a fine 14-3 regular season record, the Cellamen participated in both county and state tournaments, advancing to the quarterfinals and semifinals respectively.

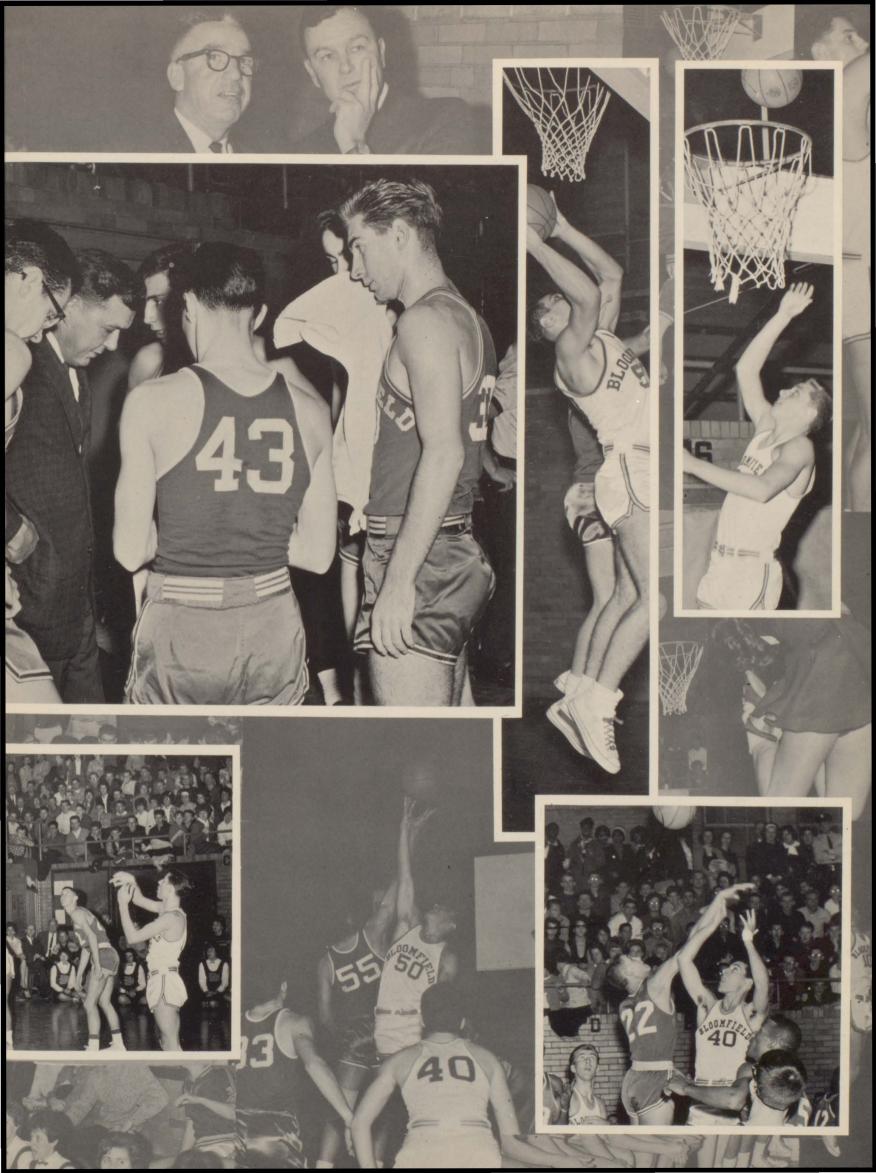

In the Essex County Tourney, the Bengals scored a crunching first round triumph over Irvington Tech, 64-39, before succumbing to St. Benedict's in an overtime decision, 49-45. In the state tournament, Bloomfield romped over Morristown, 71-39, but was outplayed by a taller Columbia team, 50-31.

Strong reserve support strengthened the Bengals throughout the entire season. Seniors Jack Martin, John Wittlieb, and Ed Skorupski were unremittingly active.

Mat Men Finish

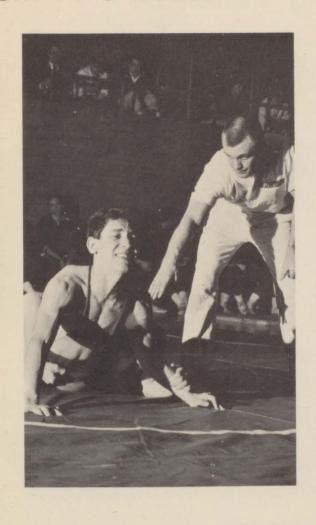

Amid high spirits and team confidence, Coach Craver's Bengal grapplers completed their third varsity season with a record of five wins, six losses. A large turnout boosted team standards by encouraging sharp competition for starting positions. Returning lettermen further strengthened the team. Conditioning, skill, and plenty of practice were important in competing against experienced teams. Led by Co-Captains Gerry Ringi and Jack DuChemin, the wrestling team fought strongly regardless of its competition. The season was climaxed by the district meet, in which Al Raub and Rich Sasso fought their way to the semifinals, and heavyweight Richie Sica earned a silver medal, placing second in the district for the second straight

The 1962 Bloomfield varsity baseball team, coached by Mr. Joseph Konn, ended a satisfying season with a record of sixteen wins and six losses. As many lettermen return, the coaches hold high hopes for the squad.

by Leaps and Bounds

Pacing the 1963 track team were Captain Dale Nitschke in the hurdles, Sam Galluci, Jerry DeLuca, and Bob Shear in the sprints, and Marty Smith and Rick Mullins in the mile. Paul Ryerson and George McKechnie earned many points in the high jump. Rich Kuchar put the shot, while Richard Church was flinging the discus. This year, B.H.S. alumnus Mr. Williams is assisting Head Coach Mr. Wilson.

The crash of scattered pins filled the alleys as the Bowling Team, coached by Mr. Hoffman, completed another successful season. A high average was required for membership, but higher averages were attained in competition for team positions.

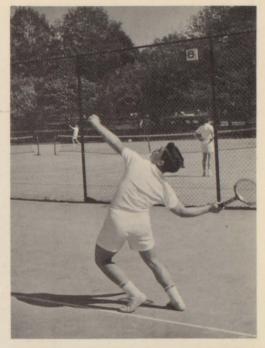

Mr. Leite's tennis team, strengthened by the return of many lettermen, looked forward to a successful season. Last year's team was the most successful in four years. The starting squad featured three singles matches and two doubles matches.

The varsity golf squad coached by Mr. Nye should chip away all opposition in maintaining a traditional winning record. Last year's team won the Big Ten Championship and posted a sensational record of fourteen wins, one tie, and one loss.

Intramural basketball provided exciting competition between class teams. The sophomore and junior league champions played an exhibition game in March, the winners playing the senior champions before the entire student body to climax the season.

The Girls' Physical Education Department offers a variety of afterschool clubs organized to devote more time to popular class activities. Whenever the Gymnastics Club meets, those girls who desire to learn advanced skills and wish more time to practice are permitted to exercise on the gymnastics apparatus and tumbling mats. Another popular activity is the Modern Dance Club, teaching members poise and grace. Both of these groups form a familiar part of the annual gymnastics exhibition. Unique, cultural, and entertaining is the Hawaiian Dance Club. Although this dance is not taught as part of the regular curriculum, many girls are eager to study the expressions and rhythms of another culture. All these activities are well attended by students of every class, a tribute to the Physical Education Department.

Members of the club also sold Christmas candy and sponsored the May Queen Dance to secure sufficient operating funds.

Working successfully, both individually and as a team, the boys of the Key Club provided numerous services to both Bloomfield High School students and citizens of the community.

The selection of a work of art as the 1963 senior gift sets a new precedent in Bloomfield High School tradition. Senior Guidance Counselor Mr. Frank Brunetto originated the idea which brought immediate support and interest from the Senior Class. Following exploratory trips to various studios, a group composed of class officers and senior art students made the final selection, String Trio, an oil painting by New Jersey's renowned Michael Lenson.

Inspired by the Budapest String Quartet, the work represents two violinists and one cellist and is executed in semicubic style. Among the factors influencing the selection were style, color, subject, and appropriateness. String Trio excels in all these, especially in subject, wherein the art of painting is used to express the art of music. In an assembly which included Mr. Lenson as guest speaker, the gift was presented to Dr. Harry M. Rice by Class President David Patterson. The presentation attracted wide attention from the press and the public and demanded reaffirmation of high school students as individuals with both originality and an appreciation of culture's fine points. String Trio, embellishing the main corridor of Bloomfield High School, attests the calibre of the Class of 1963 and symbolizes a "Renaissance in the thinking of American youth."

FUTURE CLUBS

The sharp click of typewriter keys, the penetrating silence of students studying, the soft beat of a heart, the roar of an airplane motor—these are sounds of the future. Sounds like these will occupy the daily lives of many students.

One of the most important responsibilities confronting any secondary school is developing students who are well prepared to face the future. Bloomfield High School has traditionally produced students of this caliber. The clubs of Bloomfield High which are designed to prepare students for the future have helped to fulfill this ideal to the utmost. These clubs present students with practical information concerning fields open to well-trained young people. They provide practical experience through such mediums as trips, films, guest speakers, and, in some cases, actual on-the-spot training in such activities as practice teaching. Students become aware of both the opportunities in these varied fields and also of the difficulties to be encountered. These clubs help students to decide more clearly which fields they might want to pursue.

Gaining Wisdom, As Well As Friends

BOYS' STATE. Standing: Wayne Van Nostrand; George McKechnie; Steve Ziman. Seated: Bob Keck; Dave Patterson; Mr. James Rogers; Bill Meyer; Stu Hodgson.

Each June, Rutgers University and Douglass College are host to hundreds of high school juniors attending New Jersey Boys' and Girls' Citizenship Institute. The purpose of Boys' and Girls' State is to teach civic responsibility, whereas Girls' Citizenship Institute serves to encourage good citizenship through leadership. Both groups spread the hope of fellowship among all people.

Sponsored by various service organizations, boys and girls from throughout the state attend Boys' and Girls' State at Rutgers and Douglass, respectively. For each, the highlight of the week is the mock election in which any delegate may run for office. Prior to the voting, campaigning is conducted while lectures on local, state, and national elections are being given. Delegates also enjoy a taste of college life, benefiting from the experience of living with a roommate and of dormitory life.

The three hundred and fifty girls attending Girls' Citizenship Institute are sponsored by the New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs.

GIRLS' STATE. Standing: Martha Lindsay; Terry Rowe; Nancy Reed. Seated: Linda Hayter; Mr. James Rogers, adviser; Sue Zeim.

The delegates attend three lectures a day concerning citizenship, stressing wholesome leadership as the key to successful citizenship. Between lectures, the girls are free to swim, play tennis, and generate friendships. Highlight of the week is a trip to Trenton, where the governor addresses the group. Following a few hours of sightseeing, the girls return to Douglass to finish each cottage's skit. These are performed during the last night, climaxing a week of fun and education for all.
